Summary:

Born at the stroke of noon on October 4, the female calf is Kuwari's second offspring

Detailed analysis:

The birth of an elephant calf in Kaziranga National Park underscores the park's crucial role in conserving India's flagship species. Naming the calf 'Mayabini' after popular Assamese singer Zubeen Garg reflects a cultural strategy to boost public interest and support for wildlife protection. For UPSC and state civil service exams, this case illustrates: (1) the significance of protected areas like Kaziranga (World Heritage Site) in safeguarding biodiversity; (2) community engagement and media outreach as tools for conservation policy; (3) the challenges of human-wildlife conflict and the need for sustainable tourism. Candidates should note the species' reproductive biology, the legal framework (Wildlife Protection Act, 1972), and the role of state forest departments in monitoring and reporting births.
