Summary:

Capitalmind MF CEO Deepak Shenoy warns that India's market rally lacks breadth despite Nifty's record highs, with smallcaps still down 5% in 2025 and valuations stretched. He explains why RBI must consider rate cuts amid low inflation, what FIIs are waiting for, and where opportunities lie across midcaps, financials, manufacturing, and public-sector banks.

Detailed analysis:

The commentary underscores structural weaknesses in market breadth and valuation concerns, crucial for understanding equity market cycles. Students should track small-cap performance as a barometer of economic health.

What are the two different types of bioremediation? How is traditional microbiology combined with cutting-edge biotechnology? Has the government initiated schemes to further bioremediation programmes? What are some of the challenges the country faces with respect to adoption of such technologies?

Detailed analysis:

The piece explains bioremediation—both in-situ and ex-situ approaches—highlighting its relevance for India's polluted soils and water bodies. It outlines government schemes such as the National Bioremediation Programme and links to the Ministry of Environment's funding initiatives. Crucial exam-relevant points include the technology's advantages, policy support, and implementation challenges (financial, technical, regulatory), all of which frequently appear in UPSC/PSC environment sections.
