Summary:

The group demanded that the entire Aravalli range be declared a “fully protected zone” with the abolition of any kind of distinction between “hills” and “mountains” based on height

Detailed analysis:

The piece highlights the ecological vulnerability of the Aravalli hills, a key case study for questions on forest cover, biodiversity hotspots, and protected area legislation in India. Aspirants should note the demand for a ‘fully protected zone’, which ties into discussions on the Wildlife (Protection) Act and the National Forest Policy.
