Delhi Men Breathe In More Toxic Dust Than Women!

Image 1 (Real):

 Original Image

Image 2 (Pexels):

Summary:

Using an internationally accepted scientific model, the researchers calculated how much particulate matter actually enters and settles in different parts of the lungs, rather than only measuring the pollution present in the air.

Detailed analysis:

The study quantifies gender-specific exposure, showing men inhale more particulate matter due to physiological and activity patterns. This has implications for respiratory disease burden, occupational health guidelines, and the design of air-quality standards. Exam takers should link particulate deposition to COPD, asthma prevalence, and policy measures like the National Clean Air Programme.

Domestic Abuse: India's Silent Killer Behind Chronic Illness!

Image 1 (Real):

 Original Image

Image 2 (Pexels):

Summary:

For women in South Asia, intimate partner violence is a greater risk factor for poor health than obesity, smoking, or alcohol use—placing violence among the leading drivers of disability and chronic illness— a situation that demands a paradigm shift to view domestic violence as a risk factor that impacts health

Detailed analysis:

IPV contributes to mental health disorders, reproductive injuries, and chronic diseases, surpassing traditional risk factors in many Indian contexts. Integrating IPV screening into primary health centres aligns with the National Health Policy 2017. Exam focus: social determinants of health, health-system response, and legislative frameworks like the Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act.
