Image 2 (Pexels):

Summary:

Silver ETFs experienced a significant sell-off, plunging 15-20% on Thursday, far exceeding the modest decline in spot silver prices. This sharp divergence was attributed to the unwinding of speculative positions and potential forced selling due to margin calls, surprising investors after a recent record rally.

Detailed analysis:

The divergence between ETF and spot prices underscores the danger of leveraged speculative bets. For competitive exams, remember this as a case study of market microstructure and margin-call dynamics.

Steelmakers Brace for Profit Squeeze Amid Cost Surge!

Image 1 (Real):

 Original Image

Image 2 (Pexels):

Summary:

Steel companies anticipate lower profits this quarter. Softening domestic prices and higher input costs are impacting earnings. However, non-ferrous metal producers are set for better results. Strong rebounds in aluminium, zinc, and copper prices are driving this improvement. A new safeguard duty on steel imports is expected to boost prices in the coming months.

Detailed analysis:

Key take-away: demand-side weakness plus cost inflation compress margins. The safeguard duty offers a policy lever that could stabilise prices—useful for questions on sector-specific fiscal measures.
